Course description

This course provides an examination of the methods of collecting, analyzing, presenting, and applying qualitative data. The course covers the history and evolution of qualitative research methods; theoretical orientations; data collection methods including ethnography, participant observation, in-depth interviewing, focus groups, archival analysis, and secondary analysis; methods of data analysis; and research applications including theory development and program design and evaluation.

Course objectives

1. To review the history and evolution of qualitative methods as they have been applied in disciplines including anthropology, sociology, education, public policy, and social work.
2. To understand the variety of theoretical orientations that have influenced the development of qualitative methods.
3. To examine qualitative data collection methods including in-depth interviewing, ethnography and participant observation, focus groups, organizational analysis, narrative analysis, and archival analysis.
4. To understand the methodological procedures applied in qualitative research including research design, sampling, development of interview guides and semi-structured questionnaires, and the recording of observations.
5. To understand the mixed model approach that combines both quantitative and qualitative methods.

6. To review the computer software applications available for qualitative data analysis.
7. To understand the techniques of qualitative data analysis.
8. To understand the ethical and human subjects issues involved in qualitative research.
9. To understand the application of qualitative research findings in areas including theory and knowledge development, program evaluation, and policy and program development.

Course requirements

Assignments and grading

It is important that readings be completed on a weekly basis in order to have informed class discussions. Class participation and attendance are expected.

Students are required to design and implement a qualitative research study involving in-depth interviews with at least 8 respondents. All students should be prepared to discuss their projects in class in week 14 or 15.

Other assignments will include an ethnographic observation, and a thematic analysis of a qualitative transcript.
