Trauma, COVID-19 and Supporting Black Survivors

Featuring: Wagatwe Wanjuki, Award-winning anti-rape activist, feminist theorist, and digital strategist

This 1-day online workshop uses a trauma informed lens to examine how Black student survivors are impacted by the COVID-19 pandemic, current racist violence, and past and intergenerational trauma. It will examine how university systems and policies impact Black students’ experiences of interpersonal violence, including how faculty and staff can perpetuate anti-Blackness in our response to survivor disclosures. The session will include action steps to support and empower vulnerable students and actively engage in anti-racist practice in the classroom and beyond.

Thursday October 15th, 2020. 10am-1pm
Register Here

Co-Sponsored By:
Rutgers Office of Diversity, Equity and Inclusion
Rutgers Violence Prevention and Victim Assistance (VPVA) Offices
Rutgers Title IX Offices